In Masonry, the use of a gavel, or hammer, is said to be a sign of authority.

In his thoughtful, eye-opening book, Scarlet and the Beast, knowledgeable *Christ*ian author and conspiracy researcher John Daniel illustrates the communist connection with Freemasonry. The most prominent emblem of universal Freemasonry is the square and compass with the letter "G" inside the internal triangle. Daniel notes that this represents the tools used by the Lodge's Great Architect (false God) to create the heavens and the earth. In reality, the letter "G" represents Gnosticism, the core doctrine of Masonry, and the Generative process (sex act). Masonry is, as Daniel notes, a sex cult.

However, English Freemasonry (the United Lodge of Britain) substitutes a human arm wielding a hammer in place of the "G." This arm and hammer represents the Mason as the Builder, as "man at work" creating the heavens and the earth. Thus, man becomes God. The arm and hammer is of socialist/communist origins. The same symbol is found on a bestselling brand of baking soda. Noted communist financier and oil corporation CEO Armand Hammer was given his name in honor of the communist movement. Note, too, that the arm and hammer symbol inside the square and compass is configured as a "G."

Finally, we come to the modified square and compass of French Freemasonry and its Grand Orient Lodge. This Lodge and its membership are decidedly anti-*Christ*ian and are markedly pro-communist. In 1877, the Grand Orient Lodge declared, "There is no God but humanity." Embracing Reason as their God, they replaced the "G" with the now-familiar communist symbol of the hammer and sickle. This represents collective common man, the proletariat.

John Daniel points out that the French Lodge's substituted symbol inside the typical square and compass forms the letter "G" backward, "which is symbolic of the negation of God." It was Albert Pike who wrote, in Morals and Dogma, that there is no real person or entity named "Satan." Pike claimed that Satan is simply a Force, the negation of God.

Osiris (Asari) enthroned and in the process of judging the dead soul that passes through the trials of the underworld ("neter world") on its way to Amenta. Osiris holds the flail and sickle (or lituus). These two objects mean many things, but primarily symbolize the earth and royalty. They are also associated with the Western Druids. The majority of images of the pharaohs depict what appears to be a shepherd's crook. However, in this image from the Book of the Dead we clearly see the sacred sickle identical to that employed ritually by Western Druids. As Osiris was god of the earth, agriculture, and vegetation, it certainly makes more sense to see him holding the sickle, especially when the flail for winnowing is in his other hand.

The Communists adopted both the hammer and sickle and the red star for their official logos, or symbols. The ancient God Saturn, depicted here in a 15th century drawing, was said to carry the sickle as the symbol of death.

MITHRAIC KRONOS (ÆON OR ZERVAN AKARANA) REPRESENTING BOUNDLESS TIME.

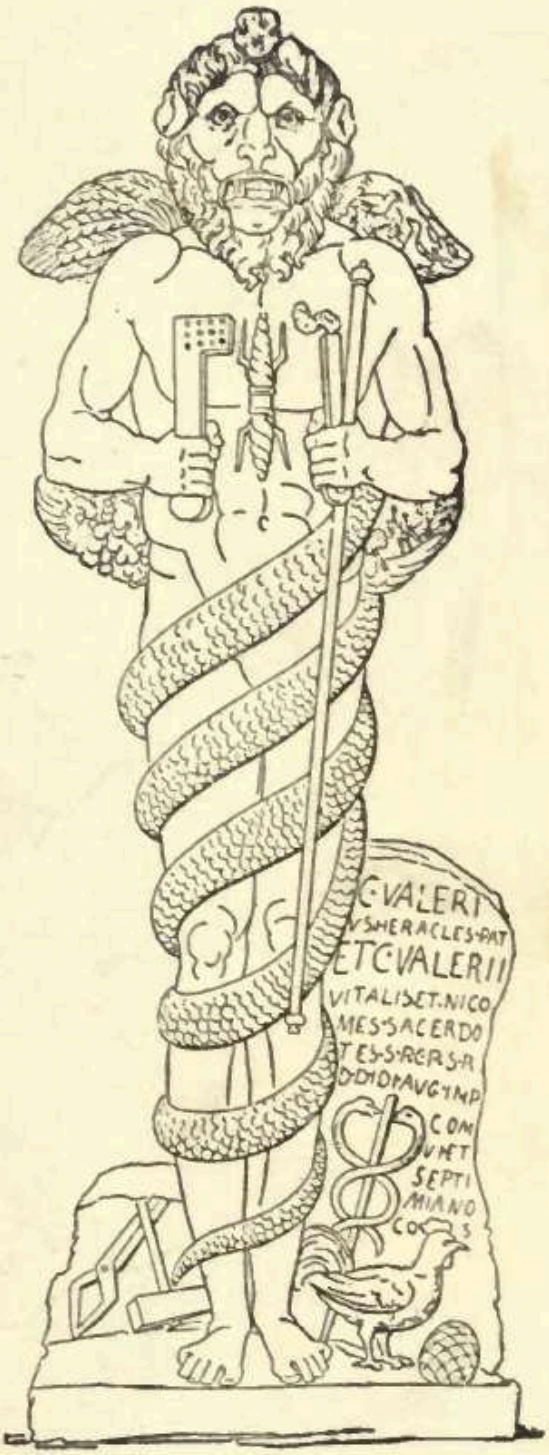

Fig. 20.

The statue here reproduced was found in the mithræum of Ostia before mentioned, where C. Valerius Heracles and his sons dedicated it in the year 190 A.D. This leontocephalous figure is entirely nude, the body being entwined six times by a serpent, the head of which rests on the skull of the god. Four wings decorated with the symbols of the seasons issue from the back. Each hand holds a key, and the right in addition a long scepter, the symbol of authority. A thunderbolt is engraved on the breast. On the base of the statue may be seen the hammer and tongs of Vulcan, the cock and the pine-cone consecrated to Æsculapius (or possibly to the Sun and to Attis), and the wand of Mercury—all characteristic adjuncts of the Mithraic Saturn, and symbolizing the embodiment in him of the powers of all the gods. United World College

While the Armand Hammer United World College is under construction, Dr. Hammer tours the grounds with his friend and lawyer, Arthur Groman, Dr. Theodore Lockwood, President of the college, and former aide James Pugash.

The concept of the United World Colleges was developed in Great Britain, under the leadership of Lord Louis Mountbatten. His nephew, Prince Charles, took over as President of the movement in 1979, and he interested Dr. Hammer in establishing an American branch to supplement the schools already functioning in Wales, Canada, Singapore, Italy, and Swaziland.

The United World Colleges seek better world understanding by bringing together young students from many countries. The young people live and learn in close proximity, in a way that would be impossible if they attended year at institutions abroad.

Dr. Hammer paid $1 million for a property in Montezuma, New Mexico, which is topped by an old Victorian resort hotel. The Armand Hammer Foundation then spent $5.5 million to build classrooms, administration buildings, dormitories, a library, a gymnasium, and the other facilities that are schools in their own homelands.

Students aged sixteen to nineteen, selected through tough competition in their own communities, attend the colleges for two years. Upon graduation, they are eligible to enter the second year at American colleges or the first necessary to operate a modern college. Contributions to date have totaled about $15 million.

The school opened in October 1982, and Prince Charles and Dr. Hammer were present for the dedication.
